FISHING CLINICS AND FISH STOCKING

By the time you read this newsletter, either one or both of our Kids Clinics will have been run and we will have stocked 46,000 cod and Yellow-belly fingerlings into Canberra's lakes. I'd like to thank all those involved in volunteering for the clinics. Your time to help introduce some youngsters to fishing is greatly appreciated. Unfortunately, we weren't given much notice again about the fish stocking. Thanks to those that did come along.

Our next grant project will be to run a "Carp-Out" competition in March, with support from Gary and Patto at Tackleworld. As this was Gary's idea, I'll leave most of the decision making to them, but if anyone wants to join me in the organising, let me know. It will be held on either the weekend of 8th/9th or 15th-16th March to coincide with the Canberra Festival. It should be a great event with some great prizes!

CARPATHON

The 2008 Carpathon will be held on Sunday 20th January. Please give me a call or email if you want to come and haven't got your name on the list. The Carpathon is a great opportunity to introduce visitors to the Club, so feel free to invite work colleagues, friends or relatives. See the info sheet in this newsletter for details. Watch this space for details.

JAMIN FORBES AT FEBRUARY MEETING

Our next meeting is on Tuesday, 12th February. We have organised Jamin Forbes to come along and give a presentation on his fishing charter service, covering the Murray and Murrumbidgee area surrounding Wagga and the Riverina. Please let your friends know as well, it should be a good night. We will kick off the presentation at 8:00pm sharp and then have a brief meeting after that.

MEETINGS AND OUTINGS

Our next outing is the January Long Weekend (26th-28th January) at Tuross. Cabins have been booked again at the Tuross Lakeside Caravan Park. We have had an unprecedented response, so it may be a little crowded! I will be in touch with everyone before then to advise who is staying with whom and costs.

Dave Walton has also booked some cabins at Tathra for our outing there on the 16th-17th February. Attendees will need to confirm accommodation at our February meeting. Not sure I can make this one.

Finally, don't forget our April outing to the new location of Windamere. Andy, Dave, Lemmo or Butty can all tell you stories that will make you want to get there! Put the ANZAC Long Weekend, 25th-27th April in your calendar. Accommodation will need to be confirmed by the March meeting.

NAROOMA CONVENTION

The Narooma ANSA Convention is coming up soon as well, being on the 29th Feb – 2nd March. We have the Olympic Cabin booked again. Members are asked to confirm attendance at the February meeting as well. Entries close 18th Feb, so we can send them off after the meeting on the 12th to take advantage of the early bird discount:

- Senior $50 catered, $30 non-catered ($45 and $25 before 18 Feb)
- Family $100 catered, $50 non-catered ($90 and $40 before 18 Feb) (2 adults/2 children)
- Extra Children $10 each

While this is another non-competitive outing for the Club, it would be great to get some lady and children ANSA members fishing the Convention to count towards our Club results. It's been a few years between drinks for the CFC! There is a non ANSA sections as well. The fishing is usually great at that time of year, from the rocks, beach, in the lake or out in the blue water. Why not make it a family outing?

We can look at booking a blue water charter with Glen Wade if there is enough interest.

Let me know if you are interested.

Good fishing! Shane

“Recorder’s Special Report”

Improving your Carpathon Results

By Steve Borkowskis.

I thought I might share some of my knowledge of Carp fishing with you all in the hope that as a Club we can all catch a few more Carp at the Carpathon this year. There are many ways of fishing for Carp and I'm not for one second suggesting what you have been doing is wrong, or everything I say is right, but most of my fishing time is spent targeting Carp, and I read whatever I can about all things relating to Carp. So I'd like to think I know a fair bit about fishing for them, and I have some thoughts and ideas that may not be the mainstream opinions on Carp fishing.

I believe for the number of anglers we have fishing on the day of the Carpathon the quantity of Carp we catch is very low. I appreciate the fact that the Carpathon is more of a fun family/social event and not taken that seriously as a competition, but I'm certain that everyone would have a lot more fun if there were more Carp being landed!

As you know there are a lot of unknown factors when it comes to any kind of fishing. Sometimes the fish aren't biting, or the fish are in one place and not another, and there is nothing you can do about things that are out of your control. So there are no guarantees that the advice I give will result in you landing heaps of Carp.

What you can do is make sure you are doing everything you possibly can to give you the best chance of catching fish, and then the rest will take care of itself. There are a many things you can do to give yourself a few percent here and there, which can make the difference between catching Carp and not catching Carp, and I'll elaborate on these later.

In the main we Aussies generally don't rate Carp as species worth targeting and have a negative opinion of them, and therefore many anglers falsely believe Carp are a stupid fish that are easy to catch. More often than not anglers don't tend to put in much thought or effort into catching them. In a Coarse Angling Competition held at Lake Burley Griffin in December some specialist Carp anglers caught in excess of 80kg of carp per day each. That's about how much we get at the Carpathon between us! These guys are serious Carp fishermen and are mostly Englishmen, but the point is these are the kind of results that can be achieved.

There are several effective ways of catching carp most of which Australian anglers do not exploit fully. I won't go into these as most require specialized or expensive tackle, and most Club members fishing the Carpathon seem to use variations of a running sinker rig or a paternoster rig so I will focus on basic ways you can improve your fishing based on these methods.

Carp generally have a cautious nature and feed by sucking food (or your bait) into the back of their mouths and chewing, they will often inhale and expel the bait several times when tasting it. If you aren't paying close attention more often than not this goes on without you even noticing. There are several ways you can take advantage of this feeding behaviour this I'll outline below.

If you prefer to take the passive approach and sit back and wait for a screaming run then there are a few things you can do to improve your chances

1. Use a chemically sharpened hook made of fine gauge wire (and check the point regularly). Carp will often hook themselves when expelling the bait. As they spit the bait they feel the hook prick the inside of their mouth, and then panic and bolt this sets the hook. If you use a large, heavy gauge, or blunt hook they will suck it in, spit it out, and munch it all day and you'll be lucky if you catch anything. If you can't scratch your fingernail by gently dragging the point of the hook across it then it's too blunt.
2. When not actively attending your rod use a decent sized sinker (perhaps a ball or bean size 1-3 or heavier), as mentioned above the Carp will feel the hook prick and bolt, and the weight of the sinker can be enough to set the hook. When a lighter sinker is used this often won't cause the hook to set fully and they are more likely to carry the bait and spit it soon after realizing the danger.
3. Check your bait regularly, perhaps every 20 minutes even if you haven't had a bite, consider replacing the bait even if it's all still there. Corn loses flavour, bread gets soggy, and worms die and go limp. Carp rely a lot of taste and smell so you want your bait to be as enticing as possible when a Carp is inspecting it.
4. Present your bait properly, this means making sure you fill the shank of the hook with bait, leaving the bend and point exposed. Push the bait up slightly over the eye of the hook to hide the eye and knot if possible.
5. "Keep an eye on your Rod"; big Carp can sometimes slowly bend a rod without ringing a bell.

If you prefer the active approach of sitting by the rods or even holding a rod, here are a few things you can do to improve your chances

1. As above use a chemically sharpened hook made of fine gauge wire (check the point regularly), if you don't have any it's worth investing in some quality hooks.
2. When you are attending your rods you can use a smaller sinker because you don't need to rely on the Carp hooking itself, you can set the hook by striking when you see the rod tip bend, the line lift quickly or feel a pluck or pull on the line. Carp are more comfortable with lightly weighted baits and will often carry and then drop the bait if it feels weight from a sinker or line so attending your rod can result in many more hook ups and a lot more Carp.
3. Check your bait regularly, perhaps every 20 minutes even if you haven't had a bite, consider replacing the bait even if it's all still there. If you feel or see a bite and miss it don't leave it more than a few minutes before checking your bait, chances are it's been stolen.
4. Present your bait properly, again this means make sure you fill the shank of the hook with bait, leaving the bend and point exposed. Push the bait over the eye of the hook to hide the eye and knot if possible.
5. Big Carp can give very tiny bites; never assume a tiny tapping on the line is a small fish. When attending the rod you can strike at these small bites and quite often hook a decent sized Carp.
6. If holding the rod keep slightly slack line, unexpected movement of the bait or rig can spook Carp. Keep your index finger on the line above the reel with the hand that is holding the rod and you will feel the bites transfer down the line. You will soon learn what is worth striking at and what isn't. Windy weather can make this style of fishing difficult.

Random Tips

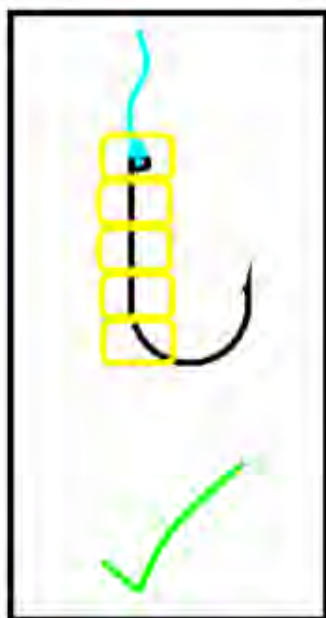

1. Do not burley excessively you'll only feed them; obviously you can't take burley out once it goes in. The best way is to throw in a little burley, but do it often; this keeps them interested but hungry.
2. Try not to use lumpy burley; Carp will happily eat big lumps of burley instead of your bait! It's best if your burley disintegrates into tiny pieces on contact with the water, leaving a tasty cloud of flavour in the water but not too much for the Carp to eat.
3. Try not to hammer in rod holders, push them in if possible. I know the waters edge at Kingston is rock hard but the hammering transfers vibrations through the water and spooks the Carp. Yes I know it might sound over the top, but trust me on this one.

4. If you haven't caught a lot of Carp before consider backing your drag off a little. Carp have more pulling power than they are given credit for and a hook can easily pull from their soft mouths, or they can bust you off on light line. At worst they can drag your rod in if it isn't secured properly. There aren't many snags at Kingston so let them run a little because they've got nowhere to go.
5. Try not to get Sun block or Aerogard on your hands because it will transfer to the bait, Carp rely heavily on their sense of smell and taste. Wash them thoroughly if you do.
6. The idea of big bait big fish doesn't necessarily apply to Carp. You don't need a massive hook (or bait) to catch a massive Carp. You will catch many more on a smaller hook perhaps size 4-12. Andre's 11.15kg Carp was caught on a size 8.
7. If the wind is blowing hard make sure your sinker is heavy enough to hold your rig in position, otherwise it can trundle along the bottom and pick up debris or sludge and perhaps snag up.

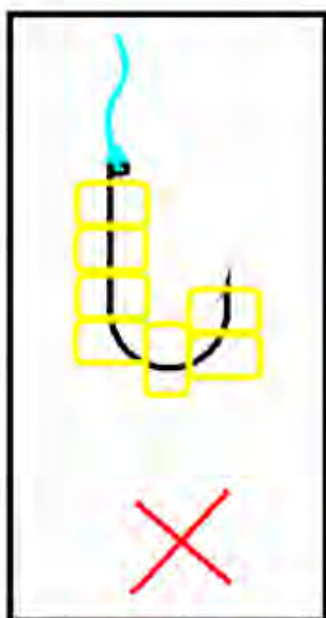

Bait Selection

1. Sweet Corn Kernels – this would have to be the number one bait for Carp in Lake Burley Griffin, it's cheap and relatively hard for Carp to steal. See below for a diagram of how to bait your hook correctly with Sweet Corn.
2. Bread – an excellent alternative to Sweet Corn, but is much softer and can soak off and is easier for Carp to steal. Also make sure you tie up the top of the bread bag because bread dries up quickly in the heat and it will be harder to put on the hook if it's dry.
3. Worms – a good bait but more expensive than Corn or Bread, they'll also attract the attention of every tiny Redfin in the area. They're worth considering as a backup if Corn or bread isn't producing.
4. Carp will take many other baits, so experiment if you like but the three mentioned above will get you more Carp than anything else in Lake Burley Griffin.

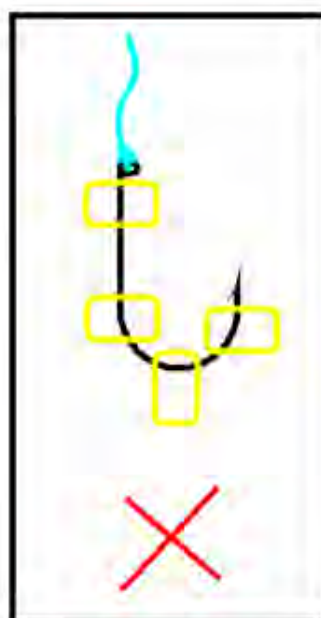

As I said earlier I'm not saying I know it all, nobody does. There is nothing extraordinary about what I've mentioned, most of it is fairly basic stuff, but it's just about getting all the little things right, and believe me they all add up in the end! Perhaps you can apply some this information to how you fish this Carpathon, I'm confident you'll have much more success if you do

Hook is baited correctly, eye and knot have been hidden, and bend and point are exposed.

Hook has too much bait, barb is covered and bend is full of bait. Chances of hook setting properly are significantly reduced

Not enough bait on the hook. Carp may sense the hook and avoid the bait. This is likely to be rejected.

Cheers Steve “

“Secretary’s Report”

Hi all,

I hope you all had a great Christmas and New Year. Mine was fairly quiet, spent with family, which to me is what it’s all about.

I mentioned last month that we had a couple of Fishing Clinics on the horizon. Saturday the 12th January was the first, and it was a great event. Rose (my better half) and I went along as volunteers. It’s was a great opportunity to pass on some knowledge, and the looks on the kid’s faces when they actually caught a fish made it all worthwhile. There were a few fish caught and a good time has had by all. If the second is as successful, it will be great, and those who assisted can have some pride in the fact that they have contributed to a great community event, and who knows, maybe planted the seeds for some new members.

Shane has mentioned the Carpathon, and a few of the outings in the near future. The year is off to a running start, with heaps of options to get out there and go for a fish, as well as enjoying the social side of the outings. Since I’ve joined the club I’ve had some great times on outings. Narooma outings are always a great time, and family friendly to. We’ve taken our grandsons to Narooma outings, and they had a ball. This year I’ll be venturing to a few outings I haven’t attended before and I’m looking forward to some great fishing as well as enjoying the company of others that share the same interest. Come along to an outing or two, you’ll have a ball.

Well, that’s about it for me this month. I’m off to the coast for a couple of weeks, with the intention of doing a fair bit if fishing. Hopefully the weather and the fish will cooperate

Cheers.

Greg Davis

NOT EVERYONE CATCHES BIG FISH!

Recorder's Report

Hi All

Upcoming Tuross Outing

We haven't had any Club Outings since the last Newsletter. The January Outing is to be held at Tuross later this month and if it is even half as successful as last year there will be plenty to report. Last year we had tones of Dusky Flathead and a couple of Mulloway so it's certain one to attend if you can! The Saltwater Championship certainly isn't out of reach for anyone this year, Andre is leading with 519 points and unfortunately for him I can't see him extending that in the near future.

Upcoming Carpathon

The Carpathon is also coming up, it's being held at Kingston Foreshores on Sunday 20th of January. I've written an article on 'Improving you Carpathon results' which you will find in this Newsletter, if you are a little unsure or inexperienced at Carp fishing you may find it very helpful. There might also be a few ideas for the more experienced guys who don't really fish for Carp much.

Outings Attendance and the Club Championship

Please remember that you must attend 2 of the Monthly Outings throughout the year for your Championship Points to count, this includes Junior Members! You will find an asterisk next to your name on the Championship Points listing. If you are one of these members who have not yet attended two Outings (two asterisks means two Outings left).

The reason for this is so that there aren't Club Members that no - one has ever seen nor heard of winning all the Club trophies. It encourages everyone to be active and contributing members of the Club''!

Other Captures

Andrew Butt fished Googong recently and caught a Murray Cod of 4.90kg on 3kg line lurecasting, Dave Walton reported that the water was rising up over new ground and that all fish caught had their mouths stuffed with small Redfin.

Dave also did a little Redfin fishing and caught a Reddie of 1.00kg on 1kg lurecasting, and another of 0.85kg on 1kg line Sportfishing. Secret location of course!

Personally I've only done Carp fishing lately, the best Carp going 7.14kg on 2kg line, with another at 6.04kg on 2kg line.

The January meeting wasn't packed and it was pretty quiet so there is not a lot to report. I can only assume some members were still on holidays hauling in the fish. Hope to see plenty of capture forms at the next meeting and plenty of people moving up the Championship listing in the February Newsletter. Good luck to those attending the Carpathon and/or the Tuross Outing.

Cheers Steve.

Hi to The Juniors CFC Members

Happy NEW YEAR

The last few days I have been catching up on my knot tying ready for the Carpathon on the 20th January! I went into the ANSA web site and found they have an interactive page to show how to tie all the Knots you will need to know so that you will not lose the Fish you hook. Log into the net with dad and mum and see how easy it is to learn and practice tying knots!

WINDAMER SILVER

Hi Shane

Some really good photo's submitted this month. In fact they were all pretty good & creative. I couldn't help but notice the lean on the boat in the picture of you. I hope it was from the weight of the fish and not the weight of the angler! A tough comp to judge, but the photo of Dave with the silver won me over in the end. A really sharp clear picture, well centred & a happy Angler to boot!

Thanks Mate Regards Patto
